

BUDAPEST FLIGHT
IS DELAYED TODAY
BY FOG AND RAIN

Captains Magzar and Endres
Ready to Go at First Opportunity

PLANE IS ALL READY

Plan Short Halt at Harbor
Grace So As To Refuel

NEW YORK CITY, July 6.—(INS)— Fog, rain and adverse weather conditions today caused indefinite postponement of another trans-Atlantic flight, the hop to Budapest planned by Captain Alexander Magzar and Captain George Endres in the Lockheed Vagar monoplane "Justice to Hungary."

The fliers were up at dawn and had their plane fueled and ready for the first leg of the flight, the trip to Harbor Grace. A weather forecast by Dr.
J. H. Kimbell predicted excellent flying weather but a heavy fog covered the field. The fliers made observations from the tower of the Roosevelt Field Hotel.

Heavy rain began falling at 5.30 o'clock and the fog thickened. Shortly after six o'clock the fliers went back to bed announcing they would postpone the take-off until the weather cleared.

They planned a short halt at Harbor Grace for 650 gallons of fuel.

The attempted flight is propaganda
in an effort to aid Hungary in read-justing its war losses.

Both fliers are Hungarians.

Buckley Street Resident
Found Dead in Bed

William Henry Killian was found dead in bed yesterday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James McIlvaine, of Buckley street.

The cause of death was heart trouble.

Mr. Killian was well known throughout Bucks County, having been a farmer for the greater part of his life. The past four years he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. McIlvaine.

The deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. James McIlvaine, of Buckley street, and Mrs. John Elmer, lian, of Huntingdon Valley; two sisters, Mrs. Sara Parsons, of Bensalem, and Mrs. Mary Gill, of Holmesburg,

and one grandchild, Jean McIlvaine,
of Buckley street.

High requiem mass will be said in St. Mark's Church on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Friends may call Tuesday evening

CHARLOTTE, July 6.—(INS)—Mrs.
Anne Hadalin, of Liberty, near here,
went out to pull weeds in her garden
and ended up in an entry room of a mine shaft.

The unusual accident occurred
when the earth over the mine passage, which runs directly beneath the Hadalin garden, subsided suddenly, dropping
Mrs. Hadalin into the entry.

Nearly a ton of dirt from the cave-in packed the woman in the hole and her efforts to extricate herself proved fruitless until a neighbor, on an inspection of the underground passage,
heard her cries for help.

With the aid of a miner, Mrs. Hadalin was freed and taken to her home where she was given treatment for shock.

FARM SCHOOL HEAD SEES
BRIGHT FUTURE FOR AMERICA

DOYLESTOWN, July 6.—"Favorable developments to general business and a brighter outlook to a hopeful world are now appearing in the offing," declared Herbert D. All-man, of Philadelphia, president of National Farm School, in an address Saturday at the opening of the thirty-first annual reunion of the National Farm School Alumni Association at the school, a mile west of here.

Nearly 400 former graduates of the school and their wives and guests from practically every State in the Union are in attendance at the three-day alumni celebration, which opened with the annual registration.

"Is the dawn of prosperity about to break, due to the definite leadership of President Hoover?" President All-man asked the graduates. "The universal reaction towards restoration of economic confidence, inspired by his proposal, was most reassuring and cordial. Those in a position to know, tell us that, due to the spiritual force behind the President's act, our farm crops, mineral production and securities have risen in value to an amount exceeding $6,000,000,000 in less than two weeks."

At the annual banquet of the Alumni Association in Lasker Hall,
the grads were welcomed by Dr. Cletus L. Goodling, dean of the school.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Isaac Stern, of New York City; vice-presi-

Burlington Man Falls
Into River and Drowns

BURLINGTON, July 6.—The first drowning of the season in this city occurred early Saturday afternoon when John Frank McCloskey, 36, of East
Delaware avenue, fell from the town wharf, at the foot of High street, into the Old Ferry Dock.

His body was recovered 25 minutes later. Artificial respiration was given for an hour, but he failed to respond.

McCloskey was sitting on a railing
on the wharf when he lost his balance and tumbled backwards into the water. It is believed he struck his head in falling as he failed to come to the surface. Clifford Price, proprietor of a nearby hotel, saw McCloskey fall and gave the alarm. The body was finally recovered with grappling irons by Captain Frank Cook, of Bristol, who operates a passenger launch between Burlington and Bristol.

Dr. William E. Rink was called and worked over the body for an hour but without result. McCloskey, who was employed in a local foundry, was not married and lived with his brother, Joseph.

NON-RESIDENTS OF CO.
COME HERE TO MARRY

67% of 190 Couples in June
Did Not Live in Bucks County

TWENTY-FIVE DIVORCES

DOYLESTOWN, July 6.—Sixty-seven per cent of the 190 couples who were granted marriage licenses in the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court of Bucks county during June were non-residents of Bucks County. Only 123 out of the 380 applicants were Bucks county people.

Twenty-four school teachers were among those granted licenses to marry, this particular profession out-numbering all others. There were eleven nurses granted marriage licenses.

There has been a noticeable decrease in the past year in the number of licenses granted to young men under twenty-one. During June but six licenses were granted in this class, although thirty-six of the female applicants were under twenty-one.

Twenty-five divorces were in the group that received licenses, including fifteen men and ten women.

The average age of the female applicants was twenty-six and the male applicants twenty-eight.

Philadelphia supplied more applicants than any other place, with a total of eighty-one, while Trenton came next with sixty-nine. In Bucks county, Bristol led with seventeen applicants while Quakertown was next with eleven and Doylestown followed with ten. Seven came from New Hope and six more from Perkasie, while Sellersville furnished five with Langhorne, Yardley, Newtown each producing two.

Nineteen men and the same number of women made their second marimonial venture in June, while one female applicant secured a license to marry her third husband.

The applicants came from New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Florida
and the District of Columbia in addition to Pennsylvania.

Exactly 126 of the female applicants told the clerk in the Orphans' Court that they had occupations other than housework.

The most popular age for the "bridal month" of June seemed to be between twenty-one and twenty-five years for marrying. Eighty-one of the male applicants and 102 of the female applicants came within that range of ages. There were fifty-three applicants between the ages of thirty and forty years.

One divorced man of forty secured a license to wed a woman thirty-five who had been divorced on two previous occasions. Another divorced man of fifty secured a license to wed
a divorced woman of thirty.

A young man seventeen and a girl sixteen was the youngest couple to secure a marriage license in June.
There were three male applicants between fifty and sixty but none over sixty.

Ages of the applicants grouped is as follows:

	Male	Female
Under 21 years	6	36
21 to 25 years	81	102
25 to 30 years	62	20
30 to 40 years	26	24
40 to 50 years	10	5
50 to 60 years	3	0

The ages of the couples as they applied for licenses with previous marriages marked with (*) is as follows:

Number of Persons Injured by Premature Discharge of Fire
Crackers While Celebrating the Fourth of July—One Youth
Has Narrow Escape from Serious Injury at Newportville

Accidents due to heavy traffic conditions and the discharge of fireworks kept hospital staffs and physicians busy during Saturday and Sunday in this section. None of the accidents proved to be of a serious nature and most of the patients receiving hospital treatment were discharged from the institutions after receiving first aid.

A Croydon boy suffered a possible fracture of the skull and six other Croydon folks were hurt in an automobile accident near Atlantic City. The lad was run down by a motorist on State Road.

A woman injured last Wednesday near Fallsington died in a Trenton hospital as the result of the injuries she sustained.

What might have proved to be a serious accident occured at Newportville when a fire cracker exploded in the hand of a Philadelphia boy who thought the fuse had burned out.
At first it was thought the young man had been blinded, but later this proved not to be the case.

WOMAN DIES OF INJUR-IES RECEIVED WHEN
AUTO HITS TUNNEL

CROYDON BOY IS HURT

William Labor, 13, Rose and Maryland avenues, Croydon, is in the Harriman Hospital here with a possible
fracture of the skull and contusions
of the right eye.

Labor, it is said, was riding his bicycle along State Road near the intersection of Patterson avenue when he was struck by an automobile driven by Edward Ivins, 70, 5213 Jackson street, Philadelphia. Ivins was accompanied by Miss Frances Galore, 23, 2957 Headley street, Philadelphia, and it is stated that Labor was riding back of another car and suddenly turned out into the path of the machine
operated by Ivins.

Ivins was arrested by Constable
Crawford and given a hearing before Justice of Peace, James Laughlin. He was held in $2,000 bail to await the outcome of the injuries to Labor.

Mrs. Sadie Lanpiasi, 48 years old, of Lodi, N. J., who was injured with three other members of her family when an automobile crashed into the abutment of the Fallsington tunnel on Wednesday morning, died of a fractured skull at St. Francis Hospital late Saturday afternoon.

A daughter of Mrs. Lanpiasi, Helen, 20 years old, is still in the hospital suffering from body injuries. Her husband, Thomas, 50 years old, who was driving the car, and another daughter, Kathleen, 18, were hurt in the accident, but were able to leave the hospital after receiving treatment.

The Lanpiasis were on their way to Hollywood, Cal., with a son, James, 16, who was to have secured a motion picture contract. Lanpiasi told the Morrisville State Police that he failed to see the tunnel in time to avoid crashing. James was the only one in the car who escaped injury.

While returning from Atlantic City yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griebley, of Croydon, and children, Edw. G.
Eleanor G. and Gladys, were painfully injured when their automobile
collided with that of Philip Bowers,
of Philadelphia, on the Absecon Boulevard.

Mr. Griebly sustained a crushed hand and lacerations of the lip; Mrs.
Griebley, fractured clavicle; Edward Griebley, severe lacerations of the wrist; Eleanor Griebley, lacerations
of the forehead; Gladys Griebley, lacerations of the scalp; Helen Stutz, also of Croydon, lacerations of the scalp.

They were taken to the Atlantic City Hospital and are still confined to that institution.

FIRE CRACKER EXPLOD-ES IN HAND OF BOY AT NEWPORTVILLE

FACE, CHEST INJURED

There were the usual number of accidents due to the discharge of fireworks in this vicinity over the holiday period. A number of cases were treated at the Harriman Hospital but none of them was of a very serious nature.

Ellsworth Snyder, 643 E. Godfrey avenue, Philadelphia, was injured by an electric flash, a penny firecracker,
which he was lighting at Newport-ville.

Snyder was spending the holidays in a bungalow at Newportville and purchased an electric flash at a store there. He walked as far as the New-portville bridge and then lighted the cracker. The fuse burned out, Snyder thought, and he began examining it,
when it suddenly exploded.

Snyder suffered abrasions and contused wounds of both hands, face and chest. Splinters of the wooden base were removed from the wounds. Both eyes were slightly injured.

Thomas McAuley, 9 years old, 210
W. Somerset street, Philadelphia, was injured by an electric flash report
from a fire cracker which exploded, causing multiple abrasions, contusions and wounds of right hand and face, chest and neck. Thumb nail on right thumb blown off.

William Kennett, Torresdale avenue and Conley street, Wissinoming, lighted a firecracker with a cigarette.
The cracker exploded and cut his nose, requiring seven stitches.

Joseph Senneag, 2334 Fourth street, Philadelphia, firecracker exploded in right hand causing several small burns.

VEST POCKET WEAPONS

It might be well for every bandit and hold-up man who contemplates a raid upon a bank, a paymaster, or in fact any enterprising robber, whatever his line may be, before starting out on his professional work to protect himself against the fountain pen. Ever since the invention of tear gas the fountain pen has been recognized as an effective weapon against robbers.

Several large manufacturing plants in the United States are making tear gas containers in all sorts of shapes and forms, the most ingenious of which seems to be one simulating the fountain pen. This innocent looking implement is an exact replica of its prototype which contains a cartridge charged with tear gas which can be exploded by slight pressure on the button placed on other pens for filling purposes.

The beauty of the ingenious little device is that it will make helpless a bandit at a distance of 35 feet without even temporarily disturbing the tear glands of the carrier of the weapon.

There is the danger that outlaws will turn to this new weapon against the police and other protectors and guardians of money and valuables. Should the demand arise, there will be some unscrupulous manufacturer or dealer to supply it. However, tear gas would be less dangerous than revolvers and machine guns in the hands of criminals.

A GOOD LAW

Business and the consuming public should unite now in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the enactment of the Federal Food and Drug Act. A quarter of a century of experience has provided it salutary legislation of the first water, both from the viewpoint of the manufacturers it restricts and from the viewpoint of the people.

Unlike many other statutes, this law has fulfilled its purpose of ending the adulteration of manufactured foods and drugs and the sale of impure and dishonest products. Truthful labeling is now the rule, rather than the exception.

Today this law has the support of the manufacturers of food and drug products. It is as much a protection to the honest manufacturer and advertiser as it is a protection to the public, and by creating public confidence in manufactured goods and drugs it has multiplied many times the demand for them.

But it was not so when the measure was before Congress for passage a quarter of a century ago. Its advocates were called demagogues, and the measure itself was branded as socialism, paternalism and government meddling in private business. The manufacturers feared it would injure business in general, although a little foresight should have shown them that only the dishonest would suffer.

A cold winter is predicted. Most winters are.

Now that the saw has won recognition as a musical instrument, it seems like an opportune time to settle the status of the saxophone.

Pretty Mary Lou Thurston pretends she is Delight Harford to help Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked son of the wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, regain his health. Travers had mistaken Mary Lou for Delight, whom he is supposed to have married in England. No trace can be found of Delight. Travers agrees to start all over with friendship. Months of happy companionship follow with Travers more in love with Delight than ever. At Christmas he presents Mary Lou with a sapphire ring, referring to her not wearing the "seal" ring. This leads Mary Lou to believe that he really married Delight, using a seal ring. Mary Lou loves Travers and finds deception hard. Travers and Mary Lou visit friends in Florida. Mrs. Lorrimer breaks her arm and they are called home.

CHAPTER XXXII.

MARY LOU folded the telegram neatly, with fingers which shook. She couldn't bear to have anything happen to Margaret Lorrimer. She was sane enough to realize that a broken arm, in itself, was not serious, but she knew the weakened state of Margaret's heart. She went at once to find Lorrimer, who had gone, in advance of the Wynnes' luncheon that noon, to Bradley's, with several other men, to watch the gaming tables and, perhaps to play a little.

They had recently come in from swimming. Mary Lou's hair was still damp and curled tightly about her pale little face. She met Mrs. Wynne and Jenny on the way out the door, told them briefly, and ran, hatless, the very short distance to the club.

Another Victory

She sent a servant in for Lorrimer, and when he came out she found that, despite her wish not to worry him and to be calm, she was shaking all over.

"What is it, dear?" he asked instantly.

She pulled herself together. "Your mother has broken her arm," she said, "and Dr. Matthews wants us to come home at once."

He took the wire from her clenched fingers and read it. His eyes clouded with instant anxiety, but he said, quite steadily:

"Don't worry so. She'll be all right. We'll get the train out tonight."

"No, I'm going by airplane. The train doesn't leave till so late. I can save time by air," said Mary Lou. "You can follow by train. I won't have her there ill and in pain and alone!" she ended, defiantly.

"Matthews—" began Lorrimer. But her mind was made up. "Doctor Matthews is all very well," she cried, "but you ought to be there, and as soon as is humanly possible. And I ought to be there. She's been kinder than Heaven to me," said Mary Lou passionately. "And what she has been to you—must you always think of yourself?" she demanded. "I'm going to the airways company and engage a plane. You can come when you please."

In the end, he went with her. He had never hated himself so much as during the short time of preparation and arrangement, when he stood trembling, like a frightened animal. He went to the place, and was sick with terror at the sound of the engine, tuning up. But he set his teeth and went.

Contact!

They were off. For all her sense of desperate haste, and her keen anxiety and grief for Margaret, Mary Lou's heart leaped with exultation.

This was living! This effortless movement through clear air; these wings of a bird which carried her, the strong heart of the engine beating . . . beating. . . She forgot Lorrimer, she forgot almost everything in that first triumphant minute.

They had been flying two hours when Lorrimer turned to her. He was very pale, but his eyes were normal, and he managed to smile.

Two hours, of almost abject terror, of a sense of sinking, a faintness, a will to cry out that he couldn't go on, he couldn't—but terror which diminished, and faintness which passed, and a will which strengthened itself at last.

He touched her hand, almost timidly, and she turned.

"I've been a fool," was all he said.

Mind Over Matter.

When they reached New York, having saved many hours, he was cured, cured for all time of that old terror, that backwash of his crash, of his bitter experiences.

Having wired Westwood House, they were met by a car at the landing field and hurried out to the house. In the car, Lorrimer, for the first time in her experience of him, talked his heart out, told all the fears which had gnawed at him, the memories which had sickened him—all gone now. He was healed. "We'll have a plane!" he promised.

"You'll let me learn to fly?" she asked, deep in her role, forgetting that she had no right to ask, he no right to give permission. But the little question moved him profoundly, filled him with a blazing hope.

"When I get back into it," he said happily, "I'll teach you—myself."

They had arrived home. They found Margaret much better, a pleasant nurse in attendance, and Doctor Matthews haunting the house like a faithful and efficient watch dog. He had had a great bone man out to see Mrs. Lorrimer. X-ray plates had been taken, the arm set and would heal nicely. What she needed now was rest, for the weakened heart which had suffered from the strain of the shock.

"Such an idiot!" she said, explaining, "to slip on—of all things—the dining room floor! But I hadn't felt well, I was a little faint and the first thing I knew poor Peter was trying to lift me up. Well, no great harm has been done."

And much good, she added to herself, thinking of all that her son had overcome to come to her—on wings.

Often as time went on Lorrimer found opportunity to say to Mary Lou, "I can't thank you enough for what you did for me—making me take that trip."

She answered, always, as she had answered him when he spoke of his first visit to the Veterans' hospital. "I didn't make you. You made yourself. To be frank, she told him honestly, "I didn't care whether you came or not. Or, no, I did care! I wanted you to come, for your mother's sake. But whether you had come with me or stayed and taken the train didn't matter, as far as my going was concerned. I had to get to her—and as soon as I could, you see."

And he answered, rather humbly: "Yes, I see, Delight."

She was more out of love than ever with the name, the quaint little name, which seemed to her so "precious" and affected and idiotic. Yet she answered to it, postured for it, reminded herself constantly that Mary Lou no longer existed.

Even her aunt and uncle had written her, from the far off and incredible isolation of their oriental jungle, under that name, written bold and black in Clara's hand. But in the letter itself her own name occurred:

"Mary Lou, are you crazy? If I weren't so tied up here, I'd come home at once and take you away from that place. It all sounds completely mad to me."

Mary Lou had written Clara often, since her first letter, had explained and re-explained, in order to justify to Clara's shrewd and astonished eyes her "job." Lately the weekly letters she had sent, always written with complete news of Billy, obtained over the telephone, or by a flying trip out to see that young man, those letters had ceased to justify anything, and had become rather reticent, so that Clara, wise woman, had announced to her weary husband that it looked very much as if Mary Lou's heart were beginning to be involved in that same "job." To which her tired and steaming engineer generally granted a proceeding husbandly assent. Not that he didn't care a lot for Mary Lou, but he was pretty busy building a railroad at the ends of the earth, was Howard. People, thought Mary Lou, sometimes disconsolately, had about forgotten that Mary Lou Thurston had ever existed! Wasn't it funny—not funny, ha-ha—but, peculiar!—and a little terrifying that a name and its attached personality could so quickly be swallowed up in a game of make-believe.

On Guard.

Larry Mitchell never called her Mary Lou, now, even when they were alone together; nor did Mrs. Lorrimer; nor Dr. Matthews. They almost all learned their parts so well, almost too well, she thought, suffering a comic little wound to her ego. And Jenny, well, Jenny didn't know, of course. She was often sorry that Jenny didn't know. Jenny didn't ask questions, didn't pry into the "past" of Delight Harford, never made embarrassing inquiries, but accepted her as she was, in the present.

Still she and Jenny had become so attached to each other that Mary Lou felt her wholesale deception, which, naturally, included Jenny, was a slight impalpable, but nevertheless, real barrier between them. Even if Jenny didn't know and pry—bless her!—Mary Lou had all ways to be on her guard.

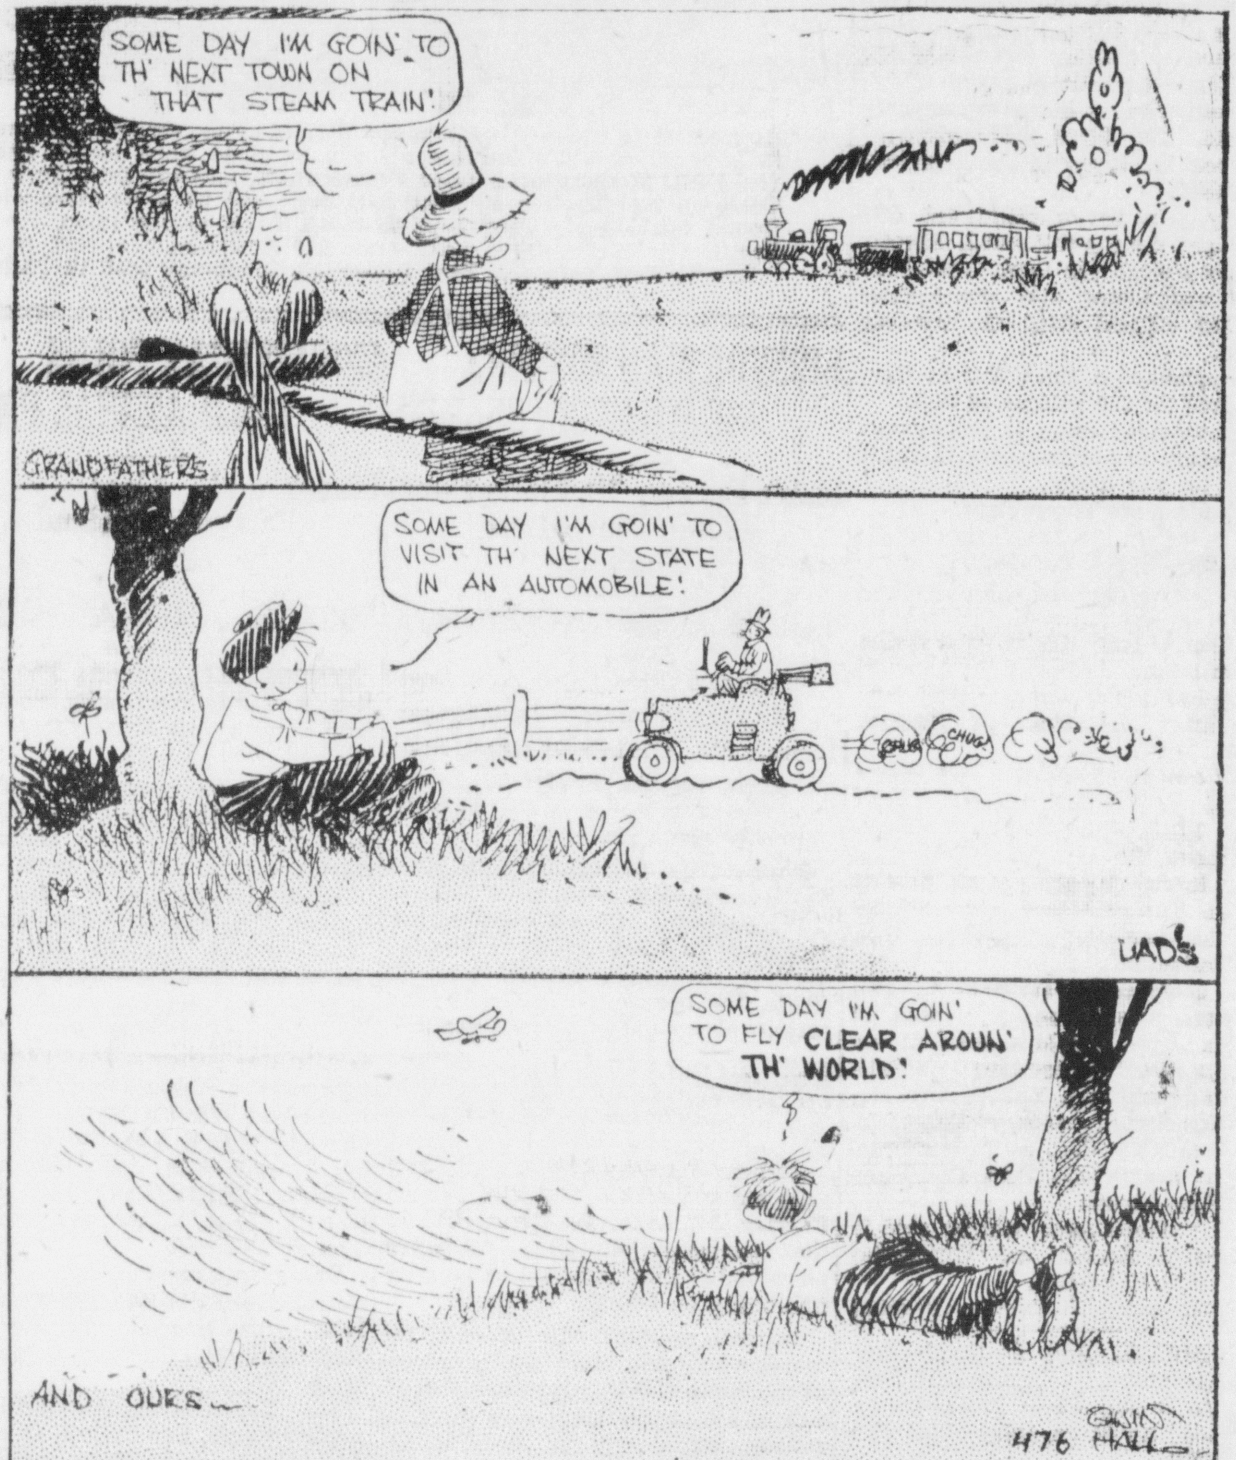

And lately Lorrimer had commenced talking again, talking of old times and "mutual" memories. And Mary Lou was forced to sit and listen and sometimes agree and sometimes say "Yes, I remember," or "Tell me again, I've forgotten. No, I don't recall Dolly Jameson, who was she? Oh, a man? No, Lorry, I don't think I remember, it was so long ago." And listening and answering, she became slowly aware of one of the unendurable things she had to cope with, which was her very real, very alive jealousy of the actual Delight.

Whether she lived or not, whether or not she ever came back to complete Lorrimer's healing and mold his happiness. Mary Lou hated her, and feared her, and was sickeningly jealous of her.

"But he loves me!" she would tell herself foolishly, and with a futile effort to gain some comfort out of all this uncomfortable tangle. "But he loves me," she would repeat. And then would be forced to face the fact that, while he loved her, it was because he thought her—Delight.

Builds Replica of Holy Land Garden in Society's Playground

A Faithful Reproduction of a Corner of Palestine Has been Created in an Exclusive Section of Long Island by Mrs. Martin Littleton to House Her Collection of Biblical Treasures.

FRIDA ABRAHAM and MRS. LITTLETON BEFORE ONE OF PAINTINGS

By ALICE ALDEN

NEW YORK, July 6.—In fashionable Manhasset, one of Long Island's most exclusive colonies, there has been reproduced a lovely corner of the Holy Land. In a garden that is not far from the estates at which some of society's swiftest and swankiest parties are held is a library sacred to the Bible and to the students thereof.

Mrs. Martin Littleton, wife of the famous lawyer, is the woman responsible for the library and the bit of reconstructed Palestine. A firm believer in the imminent coming of Christ again to this earth, she believes that her contribution is of the utmost importance to bring people back to a realization of the verities to be found in the Holy Writ.

The library, a tiny white house which is a duplicate of any good Palestinian house, is hidden away in a garden within a garden of spreading apple trees. The inner garden contains a fountain and a pool surrounded by palm trees, and is tiled in bright blue and red. So faithfully has the garden been created that visitors familiar with the Holy Land declare it a perfect replica of a garden there.

Within the little white house, divans, rich silk hangings, low carved tables, furniture with mother-of-pearl inlays, and dim lights faintly glowing through windows of crimson and blue glass, wonderfully convey the Palestinian atmosphere.

Everything is in Biblical colors, everything was brought direct from Palestine by Mrs. Littleton, who says that the whole project began as a room built to house her collection of rare religious literature. Some of the volumes were once the property of the famous British evangelist, Dr. Charles Spurgeon.

An artist from Jerusalem, Miss Frida Abraham, has just completed a striking fresco of Palestine, painted on the high cement wall which surrounds the garden. It is a panorama of the Holy Land giving vivid glimpses of some of the famous places, such as the Mount of Olives and the Garden of Gethsemane.

Mrs. Littleton herself greets visitors to this unique spot that seems so remote from the throbbing, hectic world of today. She wears the picturesque robes of ancient Palestine, drapes of heavy crimson and blue silk, and the white scarf covers her head. Beautifully, she fits into the wonderful picture she has created.

Mrs. Littleton believes that the stars hold in their mysterious movements and depths the key to everything written in the Bible. And so on the ceiling of the house is a reproduction of the stars of the zodiac and the symbols that convey a scriptural interpretation of the zodiac. There are texts that bear out Mrs. Littleton's theories. Two text books that she uses and consults are "The Witness of the Stars" and "The Gospel in the Stars."

An enormous library of modern Biblical text books has been assembled by Mrs. Littleton for the use of Bible students. And a lecture hall with platform and a collection of lantern slides, has been made available for Sunday school classes. Mrs. Littleton said that although the library had originally been intended for friends and students of the Scriptures, she had decided to have it open every afternoon for anyone interested in Palestine, ancient and modern.

The trials and tribulations that have beset humanity during the World War, and since then, are all foretold in the Bible, explains Mrs. Littleton. And so, together with Miss Christabel Pankhurst, who was once a militant suffragette, and many others Mrs. Littleton believes that what has occurred is but a sign that the second coming of Christ is at hand. A keen and earnest student of the Bible, she believes that more than ever people are turning to its pages to study and expound its eternal verities. Already many people have visited the tiny bit of the Holy Land that has been so lovingly created in Long Island.

EXPERT URGES U. S. TO CUT DOWN ITS ENORMOUS WHEAT-COTTON SURPLUS

By Harry Bergman

(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
CHICAGO, July 6.—Removal from the domestic market of the Federal Government's supplies of wheat and cotton would hasten recovery from the current depression, in the opinion of Edward Jerome Dies, member of the Chicago Board of Trade and a well-known expert on commodity exchanges.

In an article published in the June number of Chicago Commerce, official organ of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Dies declares that the heaped up stocks of wheat and cotton, purchased by the Federal Farm Board in carrying out its price stabilization program, constitute an important obstacle to the hoped-for economic renaissance.

Unless the farm board erases its enormous surpluses from the market, Dies asserts, "Red lights that have blinked down the highways of business for two years will continue flashing their warnings. Business is stymied."

While these vast wheat and cotton stocks in the government's hands hang over the markets of the world, Dies contends, a broad business recovery is impossible.

"Until they are improved," Dies continues, "millions of cotton workers will remain impoverished and grain farmers will see more of their lands seized through foreclosure."

"Removal would at once revivify grain and cotton industries with their immense farmer buying power; factories would re-open; retail stocks would move; freight and passenger business would swing upward, preserving the rail system and the holdings of millions of small investors; and the armies of idle would again find work."

A definite policy of withholding the surplus wheat and cotton, the supplies to be used only in the event of war or famine, is advocated by the market expert.

Dies severely criticizes the Federal Farm Board and the Agricultural Marketing Act, which created the body, declaring:

"Professional farm spokesmen forced the government into a tragic blunder in enactment of the law. It is but one step more to socialism if their unsound doctrines are further pursued. The hour for swift, courageous government action has tolled."

Contending that the policy implied by enactment of the agricultural marketing act has proved impractical, Dies asserts that "farmers, anxious to fight their own battles, are now appealing for relief from government relief."

The stabilization program, Dies charges, has produced unfavorable effects abroad, as well as at home, with European nations adopting policies of retaliation against the United States.

"It has been asserted," Dies writes, "by neutral observers that Europe's anger over America's price pegging policy decided Europe to do with less American wheat, to lift tariffs and to enforce milling regulations curtailing the use of imported wheats. Germany put her wheat tariff at $1.62; France at 85 cents and Italy at 87 cents. Yet the law is intended, among other things, to broaden our foreign markets and control our surplus."

"The farm board expected to have upwards of 200 million bushels of wheat on hand July 1. Carrying charges on this wheat and on cotton also held, have been estimated at more than $175,000 a day.

"Far back in the days when markets were used by adventurers who sought to bludgeon and control the channels of trade and work squeezes and corners, there was an old saying that it was easy to corner a market but hard to bury the corpse. The government has a ghastly wheat and cotton corpse to bury."

Croydon Boy Run Down by Motorist

his wife, Mary, 35, narrowly missed serious injury or possible death, when their automobile crashed through the guard rail on the Lincoln Highway at Parkway, and slipped down a 100-foot embankment, finally being wedged between two trees, near South Langhorne.

Mrs. Cannon received a slight cut on the face for which she refused medical treatment. Otherwise neither was injured.

Patrolman Hohlfelder, of Langhorne State Highway Patrol, who investigated, expressed amazement that the occupants had escaped serious hurts in the machine's plunge.

Cannon was driving the car toward Philadelphia from Trenton. At Parkway, he said, he was blinded by headlights of a car approaching from the right. The front of the machine hit the guard rail and knocked down eight posts before heading down steep bank. Its drop was brought to a halt when it wedged snugly between two trees at the foot of the incline.

Three wreckers were used to the damaged vehicle to the road face. For three hours, repairmen labored and finally hoisted the machine. During that time, Hohlfelder directed traffic on the road at a point.

William Meadowcroft, 77, Just Recovered From Serious Illness, Is Back On Job He's Filled For Half Century

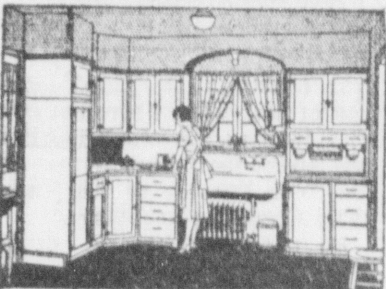

MEADOWCROFT and EDISON.

WILLIAM H. MEADOWCROFT

Rare it is to find the kind of true and devoted service personified by William H. Meadowcroft in his half century of association with Thomas A. Edison as his confidential secretary. This pleasant white-haired man of 77 years has grown old in the trusted employ of the "Wizard of Menlo Park," the while he has been a distinguished developer of decorative electric lamps, the first to experiment with the X-ray and a contributor to developments with electric signs. Rare with employee and employer, too, is the light in which Mr. Meadowcroft holds the noted inventor. "They say no man is a hero to one who is close to him. But this is an exceptional case." Those are Mr. Meadowcroft's words and they aptly describe the type of devoted service which he has rendered throughout 50 years of loyalty.

12,000 Miles a Month

That's traveling some!

The average man drives his private car about 1000 miles a month.

Our buses are driven about 400 miles every day, or about 12,000 miles per month.

That's a lot of mileage. It's nearly 150,000 miles a year.

Each month our buses travel a distance equal to a journey half around the world.

Is it strange, considering this mileage, that occasionally a feed pipe breaks, a spark plug goes bad, or something else happens that temporarily puts a bus out of commission?

Is it strange that, once in a while, a bus may be a little off schedule because a tire was punctured?

Anywhere along the main highways one will see private cars, and for that matter the big inter-state buses, temporarily delayed. It is nothing unusual.

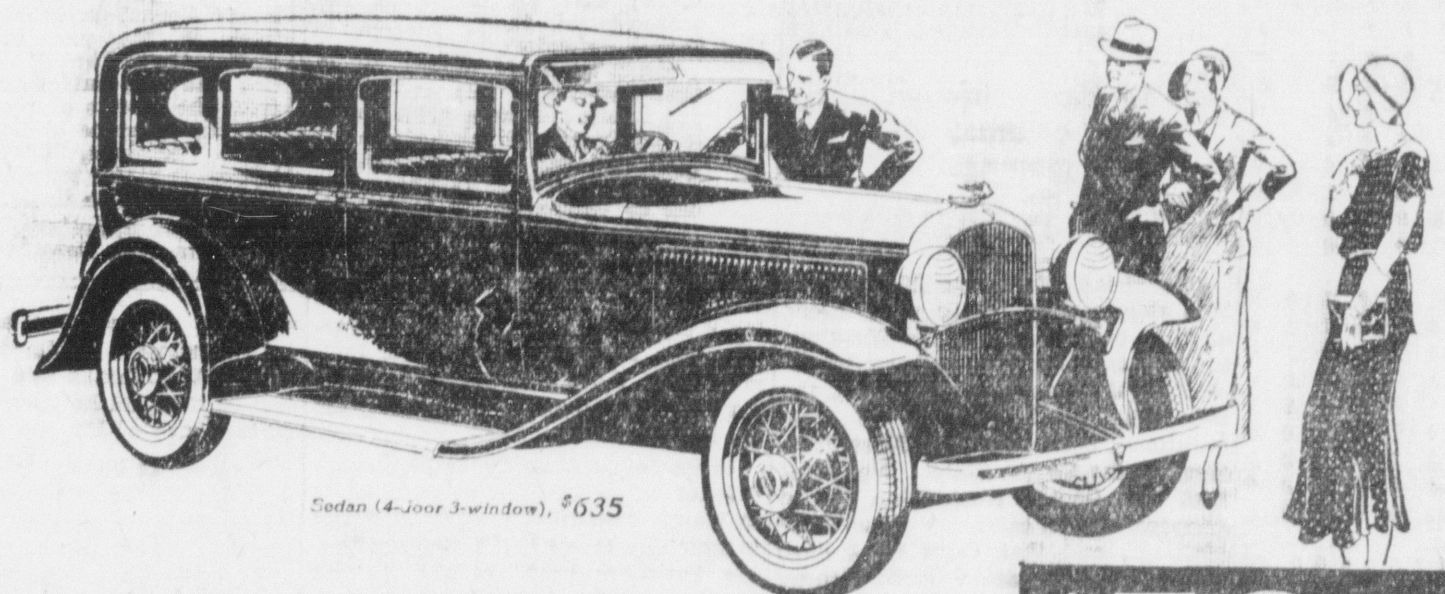

When your bus, or your trolley car, may be off schedule, give thought, please, to the thousands of miles these vehicles are operated every month for the convenience of the public.

Whenever there is a serious impairment of schedule, a reserve bus, or reserve trolley, is immediately called into service, but records show that the buses and trolleys are 90 per cent. on schedule, which is a pretty good record, considering everything.

When you ride the buses next time, just give a thought to those 400 miles they travel every day—those 12,000 miles they journey every month.

NEW PLYMOUTH

FLOATING POWER

.. and FREE WHEELING

To produce in 1931 an achievement in motor car design, engineering and pricing so revolutionary that it transcends every previous standard of quality, performance and value in the field of lowest price is to challenge the world.

That is precisely what the New Plymouth does.

For years, while designing fine Sixes and Eights for Chrysler, Dodge and DeSoto, Chrysler Motors engineers have worked unceasingly for the perfected Four.

Now they give you the results of their labors and discoveries—

The New Plymouth, a quality car of lowest price with the Smoothness of an Eight and the Economy of a Four—due to Plymouth's exclusive Floating Power.

Here is power unshackled, yet power as smooth as satin, as soft as velvet. Here is power without vibration—literally floating; power so silken that even experts could not name the number of cylinders under the Plymouth hood, and many guessed the New Plymouth to be an Eight.

Plymouth now also gives you Free Wheeling which makes it possible to shift gears between all forward speeds without declutching.

Besides Free Wheeling Plymouth offers a new Easy-Shift transmission which makes it possible to shift not only from second to high at speeds of 35 or 45 miles an hour but back into second at these speeds, when you need sudden acceleration, without clashing or grinding.

The new Plymouth engine develops 56 brake-test horsepower—with actual stop-watch speed of 65 to 70 miles per hour; pick-up from 0 to 40 miles in 9.7 seconds.

Among all cars in the lowest-price field, only Plymouth has weather-proof hydraulic brakes—simplest and unexcelled for safety and smoothness.

Chrysler Motors engineers have given Plymouth a double-drum frame of gravity, still greater safety, still greater riding ease, still finer style.

We believe the new Plymouth establishes in the field of lowest price a new degree of artistic advancement with new eye-compelling beauty of line and color.

Plymouth challenges with full-size Safety-Steel body, with wire wheels standard, with hydraulic shock absorbers. No feature of comfort, of reliability, of economy has been left out of the New Plymouth.

I am happy to extend to the entire motoring world a cordial welcome to see, to drive and to ride in the New Plymouth, and to invite comparison between this exceptional product of Chrysler Motors engineering and any car in the world at or near its price.

NEW AND BRILLIANT CHAPTER BEING WRITTEN AT INVERNESS

By JAMES L. KILGALLAN
(International News Service Sports Writer)
INVERNESS COUNTRY CLUB, Toledo, Ohio, July 6.—A new and brilliant chapter in American golfing history was being written at picturesque Inverness today.

George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, a slim, Prussian-looking chap with a highly developed competitive temperament, and Billy Burke, of Greenwich, Conn., a rugged, phlegmatic fellow of Polish descent, were staging their second 36 hole play-off for the national open golf championship to settle the question of which has the right to wear the diadem relinquished by the illustrious Bobby Jones.

They tried to settle the issue in a play-off yesterday but after playing a breath-taking round of 36 holes, they holed out with identical scores of 149. It required a birdie three on the final green by Von Elm to do it but he did, just as he did the day before on the same green when confronted with a similar crisis.

For sheer drama nothing in the history of golf compares with the situation that has developed as a result of thrilling, never-say-die battle that is being waged by Von Elm and Burke. There have been ties and play-offs before in national opens but never a double 36 hole play-off.

Von Elm and Burke, with tie scores of 292, emerged on top Saturday evening after a gruelling 72 hole test of medal play with a field of 150 of the world's greatest golf stars. Von Elm, after apparently having the championship within his grasp, faltered in the final holes and came to the last tee needing a birdie three to tie Burke.

Encircled by a gallery of several thousand spectators in summery attire and amid a tremendous hush, Von Elm stood on the final green which he had reached in two Herculean shots and sank a difficult uphill putt of ten feet for the birdie and the necessary tie. That performance required supreme nerve.

Again, yesterday, Von Elm went into the final hole—the thirty-sixth of the play-off with Burke—needing a birdie. Again he stood on the treacherous undulating emerald carpet which he had miraculously reached in two. He was again ten feet from the cup. He knelt carefully and surveyed the rolling terrain, the while reflectively stroking his chin. He took his stance and an awesome silence. He drew back his putter and gently stroked the ball. The little white pellet slid straight as a die into the cup.

WASHINGTON ALWAYS HAD GREAT VISION

Had to Pass Through Early
Day of Small Beginnings

LETTER IS REVEALED

The vision of George Washington that always rises before us at every mention of his name, is the Washington of later years, the commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary Army, the man who presided over the Constitutional Convention, the First President of the United States. We forget that even George Washington had to pass through an early day of small beginnings, and that there must have been a first occasion when George Washington had to "carry his district," like any small-town office-holder of today.

The Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission has been at pains to furnish these reminders of Washington's first small entries into office, his first attempts at the statesmanship in which he afterward proved himself so great.

In 1775, Washington had rushed back from Braddock's troops on an important errand. Braddock needed cash with which to pay off his men. His aide, Col. Washington, volunteered to get the needed money at the Virginia capital, Williamsburg. Incidentally he did obtain the 4,000 pounds needed, but he obtained it by borrowing, since the paymaster was absent.

On his way back to Braddock, he paused at Winchester in the Shenandoah Valley, and there wrote a letter to his brother Jack in which he toys with the idea of running as representative of Fairfax County in the Virginia House of Burgesses. Evidently a turn for politics had overtaken him, as it had other members of his family.

In this letter to Brother Jack, he reports that Major Carlyle had banter-

Tennis Crisis Coming

By HARDIN BURNLEY

WITH Wimbledon's victories and reverses a matter of history, the world's tennis spotlight shifts from England to France where Uncle Sam's youthful David Cup hopefuls will rest for but a few days and then resume the training grind for the European inter-zone finals (July 17-19) that will determine their prospects of finally playing the French defenders.

Henri Cochet's defeat on the first day (June 22) at Wimbledon looms still as a grim portent to the French, crippled also by the continued poor health of Rene Lacoste. American, Japanese, English or German—any team which reaches the finals should lift the Davis Cup unless a Joan of Arc miracle rejuvenates the French defenders.

The U. S. team is not expecting clear sailing, for the English and Japs have shown improved strength. John Bull's favorite, "Bunny" Austin, is hitting a winning stride and G. P. Hughes has been exhibiting remarkable form. Nigel Sharpe's Wimbledon win over Henri Cochet may have been a flash in the pan because the French ace had but two days' practice and was suffering obviously from the effects of recent illness. However, Sharpe and one or two other Britishers, hitherto hardly known in major tennis, may shine at the inter-zone finals.

In the meantime, everything points to Jean Borotra as the one who will have to carry the chief burden for France. The "Bounding Basque" (all Basques "bound" in sport vulgate) gives evidence of tiring after years of vigorous competition. Jacques Brugnon's game is only fair; ditto Boussus and Berthet. The latter trio seems too young; the famous trinity—La Coste, Cochet and Borotra appear to be too old. Such thoughts fix wings to that Davis Cup.

Only a miracle—or the complete flop of the leading contenders—can keep that famous trophy in France. Not since the Marne and Verdun has Gallie sporting blood been stirred so deeply. Perhaps a miracle will be performed. The French can do such things in war and, maybe, in tennis.

ingly suggested that he run as burgess, but, before he will do so, Jack must first learn whether Col. Fairfax has any intention of running for the same office.

In December of that year Lieutenant Colonel Adam Stephen wrote a letter to Washington from Fort Cumberland in which he refers to Washington having been "insulted" at the Fairfax election, a reference which leads some authorities to the conclusion that Washington may have seen his way clear to run for the office—but lost. However, Washington's own poll list of the election for Fairfax County does not include his name; but it is among those who did not succeed at the polls in Frederick County, the frontier county with Winchester as its courthouse.

In 1758, Washington again offered himself as burgess from Frederick County, and this time he won, by a count of 310 to 45.

During both these elections Washington was away from his home county on public business, but in the final election this appears to have done no damage to his interests. It may be, also, that he owed some of his success to a capable manager, Col. James Wood, for Washington wrote a letter to Wood in which he expresses the warmest appreciation and gratitude for the services rendered. Thereafter George Washington had little opposition in the part he played in the Virginia House of Burgesses.

Students of history will be quick to compare the early political career of Washington with that of Abraham Lincoln. Each seems to have gained his first lesson in statesmanship from the chagrin of defeat. The difference between them begins with the fact that Lincoln was not the military man but almost wholly the statesman. As such he suffered more defeat than Washington even though Washington was a candidate for office more often.

The point is that both mastered the arts of statesmanship, and learned it first in the hard school of winning votes against opposition. A simple operation in arithmetic discloses the fact that Washington entered the Legislature of his State at the age of 27. Thus his beginnings in statecraft are almost parallel with his first military

NEW YORK, July 6.—The collapse of Washington and the continued spurt of the Brooklyn Robins featured the play-off of the pennant contenders in the big leagues during the past week.

The Robins, who captured six of their seven games in the week ending last night, boast a winning streak of five games and have won sixteen of their last twenty starts.

Brooklyn's belated drive has made an old-fashioned four-club race out of the National League flag chase, the Robins are only half a game behind the second-place Giants and four games behind the league-leading Cardinals while Chicago's Cubs, in fourth place, trail the Cards by only 4½ games.

The Robins threaten to upset the old saw, which was held good in eight cases out of ten, that the club which leads the league on July 4th will win the pennant. Last year Brooklyn was leading the parade on the evening of Independence Day, but the Cardinals won the flag by a great stretch drive. This season the Robins are out to turn the tables on St. Louis.

The July 4th likely will hold good in the case of the Athletics, however. A week ago yesterday they were only a game and a half ahead of Washington. But as the result of winning four out of seven during the week while the Senators captured only two of their seven.

WILKES-BARRE, July 6—(INS)—The depression has apparently affected the marriage mart in Luzerne county, according to figures compiled at the court house.

During June this year, statistics show, the traditional month of brides suffered a decrease in number of marriages.

A total of 320 marriage licenses were issued during June of this year while 372 were issued in the same month a year ago.

HARRISBURG, July 6—(INS)—Spartan fortitude, which kept him going in spite of all odds, won for Jack Bradbury, 23, of Wilkesburg, his coveted diploma at the State Police training school at Hershey.

Bradbury, on the graduating program at the school, suffered a broken leg in a jiu jitsu wrestling match, state police headquarters disclosed after the graduation, but took part in mounted exercises and performed equestrian stunts after the leg had been set.

Bradbury, state police officials said, insisted on taking his place in the exercises despite the pain of his leg.

He has been assigned to Troop D of the force, at Butler, and will join the troop in the near future.

CHAMBERSBURG, July 6—(INS)—Fish wardens in Franklin county have opened an investigation to determine what killed several hundred game fish, found dead in Conococheague Creek, near here.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 6—(INS)—A campaign for removal of billboards from rural highways in Lackawanna county has been started by the Lackawanna County Federation of Women's Clubs. Members have pledged themselves not to patronize those using such bill boards for advertising purposes.

Cooperation of local advertisers in the campaign has been asked and several companies have joined by cancelling all outstanding contracts for billboard advertising.

As U. S. Finance Met French

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon is shown at left with Pierre Etienne Flandin, French Minister of Finance, when the two representatives of their governments met for the first time in Paris to discuss the one-year war debt holiday proposed by President Hoover. Latest dispatches indicate that an accord has been reached between the United States and France through negotiations carried on by Secretary Mellon.
